3D printing

1st December 2015 marked the 1 year anniversary of our 3D printing service at the RSL! We have printed a lot of interesting projects over the last year from enzymes to brains to lab equipment, and not to mention a lot of undergraduate heads. So far our printers have been printing for over 1000 hours and we have processed over 300 job requests!

Members of the University have spent a total of just over £1200 on 3D printing at the RSL. A big thank you to everyone on the 3D Printing Team who has helped make it so successful over the last year!

Both titles are now available via our catalogue SOLO and directly from the links above.

Green Impact

How could we make the RSL more environmentally sustainable? The RSL Green Impact Team are collecting ideas to help make the Library greener. Here are some things we are already doing...

- recycling paper, plastic, batteries, pens
- switching off lights when not in use
- default printing is double sided

What else could we do to make the RSL more green in 2016? Send your ideas to beth.gibbs@bodleian.ox.ac.uk.

Green Impact is an environmental accreditation scheme initiated by the NUS – encouraging everyone to make positive environmental sustainability changes in their workplace.

LibGuides upgrade

You may already be familiar with our LibGuides, which provide information on key resources for particular subjects and guidance on searching databases, using reference management software, and depositing in ORA, among many other topics. New improved versions will become available from 13th January, providing enhanced navigation within guides, a cleaner design and better display on mobile devices. You may notice some changes, but all the information and links in the old versions should still be there. If you have any problems, or notice anything not working, please let us know.
