China Doctoral Dissertations Full-text Database \(CNKI\) - Chinese \(unavailable from 1 April 2023\)

Downtime: This resource will be unavailable from 1 April 2023 until further notice.

Our vendor, EastView, the US and European agent of Tongfang Knowledge Network Technology Co., Ltd. (Beijing), the supplier of CNKI services, indicated that the Cybersecurity Administration (the Chinese government agency charged with information security) will require Chinese publishers to temporarily suspend access to full-text view/downloads of this content type, as soon as April 1 as CAC creates new compliance standards for publishers. However, it is unclear when CAC will complete the creation of such new compliance standards and what content may then become accessible after that. These conditions are breaking news for us in Bodleian, our vendor and their partners in China, who supply the content for overseas use. The situation remains fluid and uncertain at this moment in time. We will monitor the situation and will keep our readers informed of developments as and when we find out. ##

Biographical / Historical

The British and Foreign Anti-Slavery and Aborigines' Protection Society was formed in 1909 through the amalgamation of the two bodies that form its name.

The roots of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society go back to the 18th century, and the beginnings of a largely Quaker-inspired movement to abolish the slave trade. However, even after the abolition of the trade in Britain in 1807, and the emancipation of slaves in the colonies in 1834, an alternative form of slavery, the 'apprenticeship system' continued until 1838 in the West Indies. Against this background, in 1823, a number of men led by William Wilberforce and Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton began to meet regularly in London to discuss the slave trade and slavery in British possessions. The resulting organisation, the Committee on Slavery, later changed its name to The Society for the Amelioration and Gradual Abolition of Slavery, and in 1835 to the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, committed to ending slavery worldwide. During the 19th century, the Society campaigned on a number of related issues, including the trade in slave-cultivated sugar from Brazil and Cuba, and the East African slave trade (resulting from its close contacts with Dr. Livingstone). In the 1890s its mandate began to include the ill treatment of indigenous peoples, leading to its eventual merger with the Aborigines' Protection Society.

The Aborigines' Protection Society was founded in 1837 by Dr. Thomas Hodgkin and others through a Parliamentary Select Committee set up in 1835 to investigate means of ensuring justice, 'spreading civilization', etc. among the indigenous peoples of the Empire. Its first president was Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, and its early work included the establishment of correspondence with "intelligent and benevolent individuals abroad", the publication of several reports, including on the natives of Australia, Upper Canada and South Africa, and the general arousal of public opinion. For most of the 19th century it continued to lobby in the same geographical areas, as well as against encroachments on Native American territory, the traffic in labourers from Asia and Polynesia, and the sale of liquor to indigenous peoples.

After World War One the newly amalgamated British and Foreign Anti-Slavery and Aborigines' Protection Society attempted to work with the League of Nations to make the respect of human rights part of international law. This work culminated in 1956 with the Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery, which listed and defined all slave-related practices. In 1975 it campaigned for the setting up of a panel of experts in the United Nations, later known as the Working Group on Contemporary Forms of Slavery. In 1990 the Society changed its name to Anti-Slavery International. Its main current areas of interest include debt bondage, the trafficking of human beings and the worst forms of child labour.

In terms of related organisations relevant to this collection, the Mico Charity administered funds for the education of former slaves (though the legacy was not used for this purpose until after the establishment of the apprenticeship system in the West Indies and the subsequent setting up of schools for apprentices and their children); the National Freedmen's Aid Society was in close communication with an American society of the same name established after the Civil War; and the Committee for the Welfare of Africans in Europe was formed during World War One to protect the welfare of native labour contingents in France and to care for native fighting forces.

Anti-Slavery International was formed in 1839 as the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society. Over the years the organisation's name has changed several times:

1. 1839-1909: The British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society
2. 1909-1947: The Anti-Slavery Society and Aborigines Protection Society
3. 1947-1956: The Anti-Slavery Society
4. 1956-1990: The Anti-Slavery Society for the Protection of Human Rights
5. 1990-1995: Anti-Slavery International for the Protection of Human Rights
6. 1995-present: Anti-Slavery International

Immediate Source of Acquisition

The papers of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society and Aborigines Protection Society up to 1941 were purchased from the Society for the Bodleian Library by the Rhodes Trustees in 1951. It was agreed that the Library would have the right to acquire, at ten year intervals, the Society's papers of the previous decade. When the 1941-1951 accession was due to arrive a second payment was made to the Society to ensure that all of its papers to the end of the twentieth century would come to the Library.

With the Accessions 1941-1951 came the papers of Kathleen, Lady Simon, DBE, the wife of Sir John Simon, PC, GCVO. These papers had been deposited after her death on 27th March 1955 by her son, B.O.D. Manning, with the Anti-Slavery Society. When the Society's 1941-1951 papers were acquired by the Library Mr. Manning gave his mother's papers as an addition.

Related Materials

The Anti-Slavery Society Pictorial Collection is also held by the Bodleian Library. This comprises lantern slides and glass negatives mainly relating to Africa and dating from the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Published online: 23 September 2004

Hill, Sir Stephen John (1809–1891), colonial governor, born on 10 June 1809, was the son of Major William Hill and his wife, Sarah. He entered the army in 1823, became lieutenant in 1825, and was promoted captain in 1842. On 30 November 1829 he married Sarah Ann, the daughter of William Vesey Munnings, chief justice of the Bahamas. In 1849 he commanded an expedition which proceeded 80 miles up the River Gambia. On 6 May he stormed and destroyed the fortified town of Bambacoo, and on the following day attacked and partially destroyed the fortified town of Keenung; he also fought a successful action on the plains of Quenella. He commanded a detachment of the 2nd and 3rd West India regiments in a successful attack by the British and French naval and land forces under Commodore Fanshawe on the pirates of the island of Basis, on the Jeba River, west Africa. For this service he received the thanks of the lords of the Admiralty and the brevet rank of major.

Conversation with M. Cambon: African frontiers

 Listen

No. 244. The Marquess of Salisbury to Sir E. Monson.

F.O. France 3454.

(No. 47.)

Foreign Office, February 15, 1899.

Sir,

To-day M. Cambon renewed the question of the line to be drawn in Africa between the territories under Anglo-Egyptian and under French control. He said that, accepting the definitive objection of Her Majesty's Government to any arrangement which would admit French sovereignty or the French flag into the basin of the Nile, M. Delcassé did not persist in the views which the Ambassador, on his behalf, had expressed on Wednesday last. He was willing to adopt the proposal which should take the line from the frontier of the Congo State northward, along the water-parting between the waters of the Ubanghi and the Nile. When it reached Darfur the line would be so drawn as to leave Darfur upon the Anglo-Egyptian side. But he begged me to furnish him with a tracing of the frontier which, in our conception, separated Darfur from Wadai. Going further north, the line would, as had been previously arranged, go to the north-east foot of the Tibestu Mountains. M. Delcassé, however, was of opinion that the best mode of recording the Agreement between the two Powers was to make the present Arrangement a Supplement or Annex to the Convention which was agreed upon in June 1898 in respect to the countries bordering on the Niger and Lake Chad, and which was now awaiting ratification at the hands of the French Chamber. If this view were accepted, words would be added to the Article dealing with Lake Chad in the Convention to which he referred, which would place on record the delimitation which he had just indicated to me. At the same time, all the commercial questions connected with this delimitation might be satisfactorily settled by extending to the territories which it affected the stipulations contained in the IXth Article of the Niger Convention in regard to the commercial privileges conferred reciprocally upon British subjects and French citizens.

I replied that the suggestion, on the whole, seemed to me judicious, and likely to give satisfaction to both Powers, but that before I could give a definitive assent he must allow me some time to take the opinion of persons acquainted with the locality.

It is absurd to suggest that the speech of the Colonial Secretary about the Indians in Kenya affords the slightest parallel to this (Montagu) incident. Upwards of 40 separate Crown Colonies are administered directly from the Colonial Office in regard to which a continued flow of decisions have to be given from month to month, and almost from day to day, of a purely departmental character. The case of the Indians in Kenya and their relations to the white settlers and to the native inhabitants of the country, who form of course the overwhelming majority, has always hitherto been dealt with by the Colonial Secretary of the day on his own responsibility without it having been considered necessary to invoke the

THE REVOLUTION IN CHINA.

1. When the Hukuang Railway Loan Agreement, which was signed on the 20th May, 1911, was being negotiated, the Chinese Government decided, with a view to disarm provincial opposition to its terms, that branch lines would continue to be constructed by provincial companies, but that all trunk or main lines would become the property of the State, and an Imperial edict to this effect was issued on the 9th May and promulgated throughout the provinces concerned. This decision of the Imperial Government caused great dissatisfaction in the provinces of Hupei, Hunan, and Kwangtung, and in Szechuan it led to violent opposition, resulting in armed rebellion and bloodshed. This rebellion was the precursor of, if it did not actually hasten the signal for, the general revolution, of which there had been sporadic mutterings earlier in the year, especially at Canton, where unsuccessful attempts were made on the lives of the Viceroy and admiral, and two Manchu Tartar-Generals were assassinated—one having been shot dead in the streets, while the other, his successor, was killed by a bomb when in the act of landing to take up his post—and the all but simultaneous outbreak at a later date in many of the provinces shows the revolution to have been of very careful and widespread organisation. This rising in Szechuan, fomented by a party calling itself the Railway Conservation League, spread rapidly through the province, and many cities in the neighbourhood of the provincial capital fell into rebel hands; but Chengtu itself, although for a long time besieged by armed mobs, continued to hold out.

PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, November 13, 1953—2:13 p.m.

431. For Ambassador from Secretary. Vice President Nixon reported to me that it would be most unfortunate if any impression was gained that U.S. was willing to trade recognition and admission to the UN of Communist China for a Korean political settlement. To combat such impression you may find it useful to recall part of what I said at my press conference of July 28.

“As far as I personally am concerned, I think I have made it clear I would not be prepared on behalf of the United States to try to buy the unity of Korea at the price of a concession which would involve bringing Communist China into the UN and, above all, into the Security Council.”

You can point out that this continues to be our policy and that my recent statement explaining why recognition of Red China is now not to be considered does not alter earlier statement in any way.

Sir:

I have the honor, in compliance with the Department's request of January 7, 1924 (file No. 862 - C.52/--), to transmit herewith translations of three of the newspaper clippings which I have kept in my study of the Japanese emigration problem during the past year. While not giving such direct information as was furnished with my confidential despatch NO. 37 of December 5, 1923, they are nevertheless of interest as shedding a side-light on the organized emigration to the mandate islands of Japan and to the other islands in the Southern Pacific. Reference is made to pages 2 and 3 of my confidential despatch of November 13, 1923, entitled "Passport Visa Procedure", as to the relation of Ambassador Letelier referred to his meeting with Secretary Rogers and the President, noting that he had indicated to them that his Government is interested in having a high US official visit Chile. He noted that a US Air Force Delegation was visiting Chile at the present time.

Ambassador Letelier indicated that he has been trying to explain what the Chilean Government is and what it is trying to do. He noted that there were many misconceptions about Chile and a tendency to oversimplify by making analogies to other places. One aspect to which he referred was the Chileanization of copper. The Ambassador noted the status of the constitutional amendment and indicated that the matter of the law would be finished in about [unclear]. He felt the amendment was not too rigid Data are shown as the number of dependents per 100 working-age population. Projections in 2100 are based on the UN's medium population scenario.

Archive of Malian Photography provides access to preserved & digitized collections of five important photographers in Mali.

Since 2011, our collaborative team of US and Malian conservators has been cleaning, scanning, cataloging, and rehousing circa 100,000 photographic negatives from the archives of Mamadou Cissé, Adama Kouyaté, Abdourahmane Sakaly, Malick Sidibé, and Tijani Sitou for long-term preservation and access.

Spanning the 1940s-90s, this collection reveals changes and continuities in political and cultural practices, social trends, and photographic production in Mali during the twentieth century.

While these materials have undergone several review processes, additional revision is expected as the collection grows and distribution images are edited to reflect the original aesthetic. Please contact us if you notice duplications, inconsistencies, or inaccuracies.
