

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE SCHOOLS EXAMINATION BOARD

INTRODUCTION

The Oxford and Cambridge Schools Examination Board was established on 8 November 1873, when representatives of the Delegacy for the Inspection and Examination of Schools of the University of Oxford and those of the Schools Examination Syndicate of the University of Cambridge met at the Langham Hotel in London and signed an Article of Agreement. The move followed an escalation of interest in school education, in the midst of which Oxford had founded its Delegacy of Local Examinations, to benefit those children who were unlikely to proceed to university. The equivalent at Cambridge was founded in 1858.

The Board set a variety of examinations in the years after 1885, principally for the Higher (1885-1950), Lower (1885-1939) and School (1905-50) Certificates. Examinations for Naval Cadetships were set after 1903 and for a brief period between 1888 and 1895 the Board also set examinations for a Commercial Certificate. These were all swept away by the advent of the General Certificate of Education, principally at Ordinary (1951-87) and Advanced (1951-95) levels in 1951. The Board participated in the Joint Association of Classical Teachers' Projects in Ancient History and Classical Civilisation (JACT), the School Mathematics Project (SMP) and the project for Mathematics for Education and Industry (MEI). In addition, papers were also set which were more limited or specialised in their scope, including those for Latin and Greek to be taken early for Responsions at Oxford and the Previous Examination at Cambridge. Alternative papers were regularly set specifically for individual schools, particularly schools such as Eton and Winchester, which maintained close links with the Board throughout its lifetime. Girls' schools were accepted for examination for the first time in 1876.

The Board was housed in a number of different buildings on both the Oxford and the Cambridge sides. The Oxford side moved after the First World War from the Examination Schools, which it had inhabited since 1888, to 74 High Street. Temporary accommodation was subsequently found at 33 Beaumont Street and 40 Broad Street in 1928 and 1935, before a return to 74 High Street in 1935. The Oxford administration finally settled in Elsfeld Way, Oxford, in 1964. The Cambridge side moved between the colleges of its secretaries until it settled at 61a St Andrew Street in 1914 and then 62 Sidney Street in 1932. The Cambridge side of the administration then moved to Brook House in Trumpington Street in 1937.

The Board was administered principally by secretaries, one for each side. The role of the secretary developed substantially in the middle of the twentieth century, which reflected the development of the Board itself as it saw a huge increase in the numbers of candidates who were being entered for their examinations. The early secretaries on both the Oxford and the Cambridge sides were mostly part-time academics, for whom the Board was not their first priority. However, the appointment in 1944 of AEE MacKenzie in Cambridge, and that in 1947 of GJR Potter in Oxford, both of whom were schoolteachers, marked the realisation by both sides that the Board required full-time professionals to run the administration effectively.

INTRODUCTION contd

The Board was abolished in 1995 together with the Oxford Delegacy of Local Examinations. Its functions in setting GCSE and GCE Advanced Level examinations were taken over by other examination boards: a committee of the University of Cambridge Local Examinations Syndicate called the Oxford and Cambridge Examinations and Assessment Council was set up to have responsibility for GCE Advanced Level examinations.

The records in the University Archives chiefly represent those of the Oxford side of the Board and were transferred to the archives in 1995 and in 1998. Such records of the Cambridge side as exist are held in Cambridge.
