The highlight is an archive from a crossing by a New York woman, Miss Gray and her mother on the SS New York for a 5-month European vacation. It includes menus and other materials as well as a personal letter from the father, an American financier, asking the Captain to sit at his daughter's table on the date of her birthday. He did, and the signed Menu is part of the archive (AM9 to AM24). AM10 is a comprehensive diary of their trip with daily accountings and concludes with a list of gifts that they brought back and the people for whom they bought them.

It includes menus and other materials as well as a personal letter from the father, an American financier, asking the Captain to sit at his daughter's table on the date of her birthday. He did, and the signed Menu is part of the archive (AM9 to AM24). AM10 is a comprehensive diary of their trip with daily accountings and concludes with a list of gifts that they brought back and the people for whom they bought them.

Sayers 7	Anchor Line General Material	AG1	Caledonia Wireless News 1930 4pp	Anchor Line	1929	Caledonia		Newsletter		A group of 27 items comprising an eclectic group the more obscure ephemera of travel on the Anchor Line. Specifically, AG1 is a typical daily newsletter; AG2 typifies notes provided to cruise passengers about their next major port of call; AG3 reminds us that Baggage Insurance was an attractive option; AG4 and AG5 that some might prepay the passage of a relative either to migrate or visit; Letter Cards are self-evident but AG16 recalls sing-songs on board when old and new favourites were led by a person on the piano. Particular highlights are AG17, the Glass Slide which dates back to promotions using glass slide projectors and to sell tickets. A unique survivor is AG18, a Blue Ribbon prize for the winner of a Masquerade Party. A series of 3 letters, AG21 to AG23, provides a lengthy description of onboard life, ranging from the sailing day and streamers for the First and Second Class cabin travelers (but not the Tourist ones) to the daily mid-day posting of the distance traveled in the previous day. Excellent 'Primary Source' material.

Specifically, AG1 is a typical daily newsletter; AG2 typifies notes provided to cruise passengers about their next major port of call; AG3 reminds us that Baggage Insurance was an attractive option; AG4 and AG5 that some might prepay the passage of a relative either to migrate or visit; Letter Cards are self-evident but AG16 recalls sing-songs on board when old and new favourites were led by a person on the piano. Particular highlights are AG17, the Glass Slide which dates back to promotions using glass slide projectors and to sell tickets. A unique survivor is AG18, a Blue Ribbon prize for the winner of a Masquerade Party. A series of 3 letters, AG21 to AG23, provides a lengthy description of onboard life, ranging from the sailing day and streamers for the First and Second Class cabin travelers (but not the Tourist ones) to the daily mid-day posting of the distance traveled in the previous day. Sayers 52	Carinthia 1925 World Cruise Memoir		25 typed pages of a diary kept during a world cruise. Leaving from New York and calling at Havana, Panama, San Francisco, Hawaii, Honolulu, Yokohama, Tokyo, China, Hong Kong, Manila, New Guinea, New Zealand, Australia, Java, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Mumbai, Delhi, Naples, Gibraltar, Seville, France, Switzerland, Genoa, Pisa, Rome, Florence and Venice where the diary breaks off abruptly. The unknown author expresses views about foreign cultures that would not be acceptable in the 21st century with particular disdain heaped upon the people of New Guinea. The author also seems to have a poor opinion of Australia.		1925	Carinthia		Diary	World cruise		A well detailed 25-page typescript double space memoir that it is not so much a narrative regarding what happened on board but rather what the traveler did and saw during the World Cruise shore excursions. The observations, based on the Colonialist and New York (where they lived) attitudes of the time, are a fascinating insight to the assessment of other countries and cultures. That said there are a few shipboard references, such as the appearance of King Neptune at the ceremonies for Crossing the Equator, but otherwise we see New Guinea, Japan, Hawaii and other countries and cultures through the eyes of a traveler of some 100 years ago. Their attitudes clearly supported the colonialists and the reported commitment to 'civilize' the 'undeveloped' world. This material also helps to create the profile of a specific World Tour traveler (in this case Raymond & Whitcombe) of 1925.

A Charity Concert was a shipboard event to raise funds for the dependent families of sailors lost following collisions or sinking at sea. Condition is generally as issued. A scarce commodity particularly in the pre-WWI examples. Cover illustrations are classic and poignant. Of particular note is the program from the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, a German passenger ship, launched in 1905, and until 1907 the largest ship in the world at some 24,581 tons (GRT). She was subsequently seized as First War reparations, and leased to Cunard from February, 1920 to May, 1921, when she was acquired by Canadian Pacific and renamed Empress of Scotland. This is from that single year when she sailed for Cunard. Concerts were also held on board troop ships during the First War, and these programs are contained in a separate Ocean Liners at War binder.

Condition is generally as issued. A scarce commodity particularly in the pre-WWI examples. Cover illustrations are classic and poignant. Of particular note is the program from the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, a German passenger ship, launched in 1905, and until 1907 the largest ship in the world at some 24,581 tons (GRT). She was subsequently seized as First War reparations, and leased to Cunard from February, 1920 to May, 1921, when she was acquired by Canadian Pacific and renamed Empress of Scotland. This is from that single year when she sailed for Cunard. Concerts were also held on board troop ships during the First War, and these programs are contained in a separate Ocean Liners at War binder.

Sayers 66	Cunard Glossies	CG1	There is no commentary tab on this photo but based on the plumes of water I assume that this is the RMS Queen Elizabeth arriving on her Maiden Voyage in 1946 after 7 years of wartime service as a troopship.	Cunard	1946	Queen Elizabeth		Photographs
Sayers 66	Cunard Glossies	CG2	This is not a press photo, but rather a 'trial' photo of a Queen Mary window display taken by a Toronto photographer of a window of the prominent Toronto department store 'Simpson's'. Probably a unique collecting crossover. A Toronto History collector reports having comparable photos of other Toronto scenes by B. P. Colclough, and believes that he once saw a postcard image of this window.	Cunard		Queen Mary		Photographs

Sayers 113	Cunard Postcard Series	SA1	Rosenvinge Caronia	Cunard		Caronia		Postcard		Rosenvinge, Odin	A collection of 116 postcards for the Cunard Lines available in sets. The cards were produced and distributed by Cunard for advertising purposes. Dated by postal use to the late 1920s, it is from a period of Impressionism but reflects neither that nor the Art Deco trends of the period. Perhaps that is why these images failed to generate a positive response for Cunard. There is no reference point for the extent of the varieties of these cards.

The Imperator was the pride of the Hamburg-American Line when she went into service in 1913, and that phase of her career is covered elsewhere in the Collection. At the end of the First War she was seized and used to transport American troops, with that phase of her life demonstrated – elsewhere in the Collection – in a printed ‘Ship That Brought Me home’ handkerchief, and representation in post war postcards of the Jewish Welfare Board. When she was awarded as reparations in 1919, Cunard took Imperator into service on a trial basis, and she remained as the Imperator, but with Cunard livery.

Sayers 117	RMS Queen Elizabeth Postcards	QE1	1968 to Ft Lauderdale	Cunard	1968	Queen Elizabeth		Postcard		A collection of 51 postcards from the RMS Queen Elizabeth. The Queen Elizabeth was launched in 1937 but did not go into commercial passenger service until 1946, after the end of the Second World War. Most of the images of her interiors show the clean lines of the postwar era, but something is missing from the 'Britishness' of the Queen Mary, her sister ship. The most interesting cards are those that record her ill-starred move to Fort Lauderdale in Florida to be a tourist attraction and convention centre. QE1 to QE7 record that brief period of her life. Documentation elsewhere in the collection, including Press Photographs, record her subsequent conversion to Seawise University and her sinking on the way to the Far East.

Still other binders carry Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth cards, series of Cunard cards, and many pictures of Cunard ship interiors. This binder has a Campania Stevengraph (CX1) as part of a group of early Cunarders such as the Campania, Carmania, Ivernia and Caronia. CX6 to CX9 are part of a pre-WW1 set; CX10 to CX17 are another set of early Cunarders. The famous Carpathia, rescuer of Titanic survivors, is illustrated in scarce cards CX11, CX15, and CX24. There are also several artist-drawn cards by recognized Maritime artist Odin Rosenvinge, and numerous images of other early Cunarders. CX33 to CX36 are Letter Cards with the spare pen-and-ink design that was used for only a short period. For the collector of errors, the registration of the perforations on CX35 is seriously out of line with that of its counterparts. There are several very early Undivided Back cards, and numerous Real Photo cards, including the Jumbo card in CX103. This Binder and Binder

Sayers 119	Cunard postcards 2	CY104	Queen Mary 2 Maiden Voyage posted onboard 2004	Cunard	2004	Queen Mary II		Postcard		These two books are in addition to the Cunard postcard material in separate Mauretania/Lusitania, Woven Silk Stevengraphs, and Cunard liners in wartime. Still other binders carry Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth cards, series of Cunard cards, and many pictures of Cunard ship interiors. This binder has a Campania Stevengraph (CX1) as part of a group of early Cunarders such as the Campania, Carmania, Ivernia and Caronia. CX6 to CX9 are part of a pre-WWI set; CX10 to CX17 are another set of early Cunarders. The famous Carpathia, rescuer of Titanic survivors, is illustrated in scarce cards CX11, CX15, and CX24. There are also several artist-drawn cards by recognized Maritime artist Odin Rosenvinge, and numerous images of other early Cunarders. CX33 to CX36 are Letter Cards with the spare pen-and-ink design that was used for only a short period. For the collector of errors, the registration of the perforations on CX35 is seriously out of line with that of its counterparts. There are several very early Undivided Back cards, and numerous Real Photo cards, including the Jumbo card in CX103. This Binder and Binder

Sayers 125	Dominion Line	DL1	1882 Immigration tearout flyer	Dominion Line	1882	Vancouver		Immigration handbook			The Dominion Line was a subsidiary of the White Star Line. It served both Canadian ports and Eastern U.S. ones. It was not prominent and had relatively few ships. Accordingly, ephemera of this line is very difficult to find. As can be seen in DL1, immigration was a significant part of its early business.

Given their centuries-old seafaring tradition, it is not surprising that the Dutch were a significant presence in ocean liner shipping. There were no glamorous ships but some beautiful ones, competing with Cunard, White Star Line, and the German lines. Perhaps the closest to prominence was the Nieuw Amsterdam of the late 1930s.

She was built in the U.K., then purchased by the United Fruit Company for Central and South American service, competing against British lines. However, during the First War her registration was changed from the U.K. to the U.S. since America had not yet entered the fray. The menu offerings are amazing, given the lack of British competition at the time and the primitive nature of refrigeration systems. Quite remarkable.
